MESSAGES FROM SCCS ALUMNI

Pennsylvania: Ally is attending the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. She is studying at the College of Art and Sciences, with the intent of going to Medical School in the future. Ally chose to come to Penn because the academics, professors, and facilities are top-notch. She also loved the idea of being in the city. She liked the fact that Penn has a strong campus life while still having the amenities and opportunities of a good sized city. In high school, Ally participated in the theater and hopes to do so at Penn as well. Ally so far enjoys every single moment of her life at Penn, and is thrilled to hang out with a group of students who are passionate, talented, self-motivated, and funny. Ally thanks the Southeast Chinese School for providing her a diverse community during her high school years and preparing for her future endeavors in Chinese culture and language.

Boston: Linyan was a Chinese Language teacher at SCCS for many years. She moved to the Great Boston Area this summer and now is enjoying her life by doing the things she likes to do but didn't have the time to do when living in Connecticut, such as Yoga, sports, planting, cooking organic food, reading, etc. She said she may gradually forget all the special terminologies, which will be replaced by the sound of birds and appreciation of the beauty of nature.

Shanghai, China: Tong has accepted an offer to be the Head of Biostatistics (China) at CTS (Cognizant Technology Solutions) in Shanghai, China. He left Connecticut on Labor Day weekend and just arrived in Shanghai. Tong said he will miss the nice times he had at SCCS. Mr. Tong Guo was a math teacher in our school and was the first one to offer the SAT math course.

Following the Established Rules; Going beyond Old Idea

Over thirty years have passed since SCCS was established in the 1970's. Back then it was a small school with a dozen or so students; now it is a school with an enrollment of hundreds of students. It can't be overemphasized that the growth has only been possible because of the selfless contribution of all the volunteers and teachers, and the hard work of all the past Principals and the board members. The growth in size is impressive; however, orderly operation and governance are even more impressive, considering most administrators and teachers hold other full-time jobs. This is, in no small part, due to gradual establishment of a set of suitable rules and regulations.

The unique characteristics of SCCS can be summarized as follows:

Unique "500 + 3" plan for Chinese learning

Currently, our school has adopted a "500 + 3" plan for Chinese learning: In the nine-year study period, students are taught to master (recognize, read, write, and use) 500 Chinese characters. Students are also required to write at least one essay in Chinese, participate at a minimum of one time in a Chinese Speech Contest, and read at least one article in Chinese.

Chinese, liberal arts, and mathematics as three pillars in curriculum design

SCCS offers many courses in liberal arts, such as academic art, Sumi ink painting, musical instruments, chess, dancing, etc. Many of these courses are taught by locally well-known artists. Our math curriculum has evolved in recent years into a series of tutoring and supplementary classes for those students in 3rd to 12th grades. The three-pillar approach enables us not only to satisfy the educational needs of our community but also to maintain sustainable growth.

Enriched extra-curriculum activities

SCCS recognizes importance of practice in learning. Therefore, we started offering several extra-curriculum activities for students to demonstrate and practice their classroom learning several years. Two events, the annual Chinese speech contest in December and the talent show in May, have become our community events of the year. They are so effective in enhancing our students' learning that we have decided to include them as part of our Chinese and liberal arts curriculum now.

Parent-established, highly functional PTA organization

SCCS PTA was founded by a group of enthusiastic parents several years ago. They have played and will continue to play a crucial role in school security patrol. Ms. Liurong Luo's words best described our appreciation of their voluntary service: "Dressed in orange jackets, they blend into the golden foliage harmoniously. They are angels to our students!" (See p.5, No. 5, 2010 newsletter).

The current management team has inherited a well-recognized Chinese school. We have the obligation to keep it strong. To do so, we need to follow the established rules, as they have been tested and perfected in the past. Furthermore, as a multi-cultural, community-based learning organization, we need to go beyond the old idea and to invent new ones constantly in order to better serve our community's needs. We are open to suggestions and feedbacks from parents, teachers, students, and friends. With all your support and participation, we believe SCCS will continue to be well-positioned in today's ever faster changing environment.

Thank you for your continuous support!

Summer Camp in Chengdu, China

This summer in August a group of nine students from SCCS went to Chengdu, China for a thirteen day culture camp. The camp was organized by Sichuan Qiaoban and Sichuan University. There were over a hundred students and teachers from the United States, France, Holland, Switzerland, and Laos. Chengdu, known as "Tian Fu Zhi Guo", is an ancient city rich in its unique culture and history. The camp offered a variety of activities and programs. The students were given opportunities to see pandas, a native species of Sichuan Province. They climbed the gorgeous trails of E-Mei Mountain. They visited "Du Jiang Yan", an ancient waterway system that, to this day, still benefits the city of Chengdu. They were also taken to see the devastation of the great 2008 earthquake where they somberly paid tribute to the thousands of souls lost in the chaos. Afterwards they met with students of a middle school that had proudly rebuilt itself after the damage. The campers of SCCS had been able to present $1000 to the school thanks to the help of all those who participated in the fundraiser. It was an enlightening experience.
